War on the Environment Continues in Congress

Now, more than ever, the war on the environment is being fought in Congress. The Protestant Church of the Everglades and the Sierra Club have taken a stand against the political pressures that threaten our wilderness areas. The Wilderness Act, passed in 1964, established the National Wilderness Preservation System. Today, more than 50 million acres of federal land are protected under this act. However, pressures from industry and local governments often lead to the irreversible destruction of valuable wilderness areas.

Electric Power and the Wilderness

The ever-growing demand for electric power is putting increasing pressure on our wilderness lands. The construction of hydroelectric dams and power lines is a major contributor to the destruction of wilderness. These projects often result in the flooding of large areas of land, which can have a devastating impact on the natural environment.

Transportation Chair Named to Bike Plan Committee

Welcome
The First General Convention was held on 20 June 1977 and involved all the members of the Convention. The Second General Convention was held on 25 June 1978 and was attended by representatives from various countries. The Third General Convention was held on 15 June 1979 and was attended by delegates from all over the world.

The meeting on 15 June 1979 included discussions on various topics, including the establishment of a new committee. The committee was tasked with the responsibility of overseeing the implementation of the Convention's objectives. The committee was composed of representatives from different countries and was chaired by the president of the Convention.

The committee meetings were held in a conference room located in the Convention's headquarters. The room was equipped with state-of-the-art audiovisual equipment, allowing for seamless communication among the delegates. The room was also equipped with refreshment services, ensuring that the delegates were well-nourished throughout the meeting.

The committee meetings were preceded by a technical session, where the delegates were provided with an overview of the Convention's objectives and the expected outcomes. The committee meetings were followed by a public session, where the delegates conducted a public hearing to discuss various issues related to the Convention.

The committee meetings were highly productive, and the delegates were able to achieve a consensus on various issues. The committee's recommendations were adopted, and the delegates moved forward with implementing the Convention's objectives.

The committee meetings were highly professional, with the delegates displaying a high level of dedication and commitment to the success of the Convention. The committee's recommendations were based on thorough research and analysis, ensuring that the Convention's objectives were achieved in a sustainable manner.
